Statement Applauding Landmark U.S. Supreme Court Decisions

Washington, DC -- “Last week, the U.S. Supreme Court issued three landmark decisions for all Americans, including people with disabilities and their families: King v. Burwell, Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs v. Inclusive Communities Project, Inc., and Obergefell v. Hodges. With these rulings, the Supreme Court upheld essential parts of the Affordable Care Act, and delivered major civil rights victories for opportunity, equality and inclusion. We celebrate these historic decisions, which come on the eve of the 25th anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990. These rulings strengthen our ability and our resolve to continue the fight for the self determination, independence, empowerment, integration and inclusion of the approximately 57 million Americans with disabilities in all aspects of society,” said Katy Beh Neas, Chair, Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities.

The Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities (CCD) is a coalition of over 100 national disability organizations.
